3 simple ways to recruit

CLASS RECRUITMENT

If you are teaching a social studies class, you can recruit your class to participate. By incorporating our curricular resources and guiding issues based discussions, you can prepare your class for regional competition and your top 10 students can advance to state competition!

TEAM RECRUITMENT

You can recruit a group of exceptional students to form your competition team. To build your team, gather students who are interested in research, public speaking, and thinking on their feet.

CLUB RECRUITMENT

By building your club instead of a competition team, you will be including different varieties of students as the whole club likely won't attend competitions. To build your club, target students interested in giving back to their community and students who would excel in the competition setting.
